Paragraphs of the Week.

Secretary of Labor Perkins has set 39 cents an hour as the minimum wage for Maine's pulp and paper workers. Forty cents had been recommended for Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

The U. S. Army has ordered 329 high speed tanks of the 12-ton class, costing $6,000,000. This will double the army's supply of such equipment.

Fritz Kuhn, who was held in Tombs Prison, New York, in default of bail after District Attorney Dewey obtained an increase in bonds, raised the necessary $50,000 bail in cash and was released Oct. 7. His trial on grand larceny charges, alleging theft of $14,548 from the German-American Bund, is set for Oct. 30.

Governor Lewis O. Barrows urges motorists to use great care while driving at twilight. With the change back to standard time, when "dusk coincides with the evening traffic rush" and darkness is on the border line are the "dangerous times at the wheel."

R. A. Mulherin, veteran pilot of the Maine Transportation Company, will be instructor for Bates College students who have been signed for the Flight Training course sponsored by the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

The Bata Shoe Company of Czechoslovakia has been authorized to import 100 instructors for its new plant at Belcamp, Maryland. James C. Houghteling, Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, says they must leave the U. S. within a year.

Frank H. Holley, State Tax Assessor of Maine, at the meeting of the New England State Tax Officials Association in Williamstown, Mass., advocated the loosening of filling stations. He thinks it would prevent evasion of gasoline tax laws.

The Rural Electrification Administration allotted $127,000 to the Farm-Home Electric Cooperative, Inc., of Patten, Maine, to build 108 miles of line and serve 281 members of Aroostook and Penobscot Counties.

The Federal Home Loan Bank reports that nearly 194,000 new family dwelling units were built in cities over 10,000 population during the first eight months of the year.

Construction of a $1,000,000 addition to the Pratt & Whitney aircraft division plant at Hartford, Conn., has been authorized by directors of the United Aircraft Corporation. The expansion, 274,000 square feet of manufacturing space, was needed because of increasing commercial and military demands.

George Chick, assistant chief of the State agriculture department's marketing division, predicts that Maine's 1939 apple crop will be 60% more than the 506,000 bushels harvested last year.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull officially announced that German conquest of Poland, like that of Czechoslovakia, will not be recognized by the United States. Czech and Polish embassies in Washington are kept open with their respective ministers in charge. Non-recognition of the new regime is because it was effected by armed conquest.

The war has turned the barter trade agreement between Great Britain and the United States to the advantage of the latter country. The British traded 82,000 tons of rubber for 680,000 bales of cotton. Rubber has risen from 15.48 cents a pound to 21 cents and cotton has dropped from 9.85 cents to 8.95 cents. These changes in prices give the United States the best of the cotton-rubber deal by $20,000,000.

Maine Potato Growers, Inc., a cooperative, reports it has shipped a 41-car train, containing 16,000 crates of Maine seed potatoes, to New York for water shipment to an Argentine growers' cooperative.

PTA HAS SAFETY PROGRAM

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Bethel Parent-Teacher Association at the grammar school building Monday evening. Committee chairmen for year were appointed as follows: publicity, Mrs. Earl Davis; membership, Mrs. Patrick O'Brien; magazine, Mrs. Patrick O'Brien.

It was announced that Grade 5 was the winner of the membership drive with 50 new members. The total number of new members was 85. The committee appointed to give a party for the winners was Mrs. D. G. Brooks, Mrs. H. D. Thurston and Mrs. Eugene Van Den Kerckhoven.

Mrs. Patrick O'Brien was chosen as the delegate to the State Convention to be held at Bangor.

It was voted to replenish the first aid kits at both the primary and grammar schools and to purchase Current Events for the grammar grades.

A discussion was held on the subject of choosing one mother from each grade to act as the class representative to cooperate in promoting better attendance at the PTA meetings and to encourage visiting classes by the parents. Mrs. Eugene Van Den Kerckhoven will act as chairman of a committee to choose the representatives.

The program committee for November was appointed as follows: Mrs. Dorothy Tucker, Mrs. Stanley Wentzell and Mrs. Adney Gurney. After the business meeting the following Safety program was presented:

GOULD TRAVELS TO NORWAY

The local eleven has yet to win a game this year and prospects are not bright for next Saturday when the "Blue and Gold" stack up against a strong Norway team that has already two victories under its belt. After a poor showing last Saturday Conches Myers and Anderson are giving their charges plenty of blocking and tackling practice in an effort to strengthen their team on these fundamentals, which looked so poorly a week ago.

The Gould-Norway game is one of the big attractions in this section of Oxford County and the keen rivalry results in some very well played and exciting games.

A FEW THOUSAND LIVES

An Associated Press despatch from Berlin credits Adolf Hitler with being elated to find that the German losses in the Polish campaign were only 44,000. Forty-four thousand casualties! Is Adolf Hitler elated to think that he, more than any other person is responsible for the great sorrow which has descended upon almost as many homes?—The (Rockland) Courier-Gazette.

O. E. S. INSPECTION HELD MON. EVENING

The annual inspection of Purity Chapter, O. E. S., was held Monday evening at 8 o'clock, preceded by a supper served by Mrs. D. G. Brooks, Mrs. J. B. Chapman, and Mrs. W. S. Hastings. Worthy Grand Matron, Nellie W. Hinkley of Fairfield, was the inspecting officer and following the meeting she gave an inspiring talk. She was presented with a gift from the chapter by Mrs. Agnes Twaddle. District Deputy Grand Matron, Elvina Greeley of Oakland, was present and spoke briefly as well as the Worthy Matron of Keoka Chapter of Waterford, the guest chapter of the evening.

Other visitors were present from Longfellow Chapter, South Portland; Merrymeeting Chapter, Fairfield; Oakland Chapter, and Monitor Chapter, Dixfield.

PLEASANT VALLEY GRANGE

Pleasant Valley Grange of West Bethel met Tuesday evening with Worthy Master Bernard Rolfe in the chair.

Three applications for membership were received. Deputy Ellis Davis and Sister Davis were present.

Lecturer Bertha Mundt presented the following literary program: Humorous reading, Gordon Mason Games by all Reading, "He is an American,"

Fudge and peanuts were enjoyed. Twenty-one members and three visitors were present. Halloween refreshments at next meeting.

MOVIE PROGRAM AFTER BETHEL GRANGE MEETING

Following the regular meeting of Bethel Grange next Thursday evening, Oct. 19, an interesting program of moving pictures will be presented. The subjects are "The Safari on Wheels" and "Fish from Hell." The public is invited to attend this free entertainment, which will begin shortly after 8 o'clock. The Grange meeting will open at 7:30.

LADIES' CLUB ELECTION

The first meeting of the Ladies' Club for this season was held last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Herbert T. Wallace. Officers for the year were elected as follows: president, Mrs. Philip Chapman; first vice-president, Mrs. Philip Sayles; second vice-president, Mrs. Howard Hunt; secretary, Mrs. Herbert Wallace; treasurer, Mrs. E. E. Whitney; program committee, Mrs. R. R. Tibbatts, Mrs. F. E. Hanscom, and Miss Carrie Wight.

After the business meeting Mrs. George Thompson gave an interesting talk on her trip to the Pacific coast. Tea was served by the hostess, Mrs. A. H. C. Finck poured.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Bennett returned Tuesday after spending several days with their son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bennett of Arlington, Mass.

JACK BARRY, Los Angeles, Calif., famous 19-year-old orator and speaker on General Welfare and Social Security, who addressed a large enthusiastic audience at the Odd Fellows' dining room last Friday evening. The event was sponsored by the Bethel General Welfare Center.

ORCHARD MOUSE CONTROL MEETINGS SCHEDULED

Mouse control demonstrations are to be held in four communities in the orchard sections of Oxford County next week. The tentative schedule of these meetings is as follows:

Oct. 19, South Hiram, 9:30 a. m.
Oct. 19, Norway, 2 p. m.
Oct. 20, Paris, 9:30 a. m.
Oct. 20, Buckfield, 1:30 p. m.

As local arrangements are not quite complete, it is impossible to give the orchards where the meetings will be held. Anyone who is interested, however, may contact the county agent or the orchard project leader in the town where he expects to attend. These community orchard leaders are: Willard Pendexter, South Hiram; Guy Curtis, Norway; John McKeen, Paris, and Virgil Smith, Buckfield.

The demonstrations are to be conducted by a representative of the United States Biological Survey. He will show a relatively new method of mouse control which has been found simple, effective, and inexpensive. A supply of the poison used will be available at the meetings and orchardists may purchase it there. Ten cents worth is enough for about 500 trees.

Mice are very thick this fall and unless they are controlled, many trees will be girdled before spring. As more damage takes place underground than above it the only effective control is to kill the mice. Wire, tar paper, tramping down the snow, etc., may help, but elimination of the mice is the only sure method.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Maxson, who have spent the past two and a half years at Cordova, Alaska, are the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Sanborn. Mr. Maxson has been transferred to New York.

Misses Winona Chapin and Evelyn Hunt were among those receiving diplomas at the graduating exercises of the C. M. G. Hospital Training School Friday evening. Miss Hunt returned to New York Saturday for the remainder of the month, where she is training at the New York Foundling Hospital as part of her course.

BRIDGTON J. V. TRIMS GOULD 18-6

Gould Academy went down to defeat last Saturday, before a large Parents' Day crowd, to the tune of 18 to 6. The local eleven played poorly the first half and allowed the visitors to gain a 12 to 0 lead at the half. The blocking and tackling of the Gould team was way below par.

In the second half, however, the team came to life and clearly outplayed the visitors but could no better than gain a 6 to 6 tie for the final half. The Gould defense worked well in these periods to hold the Bridgton eleven to a very meager yardage but a long pass into the end zone which jumped off the hands of a Gould secondary defense man into the air was grabbed by a waiting end for the visitors' final tally which brought the total to 18 to 6.

MAINE SHEEP INDUSTRY GROWING

Interest in sheep raising has become so keen that the Maine Department of Agriculture has set in operation a sales agency for the purpose of helping the farmers of Maine to secure the type of sheep best suited for this state. Sheep Specialist C. H. Crawford announced Wednesday.

This demand for high quality sheep is the result of a campaign sponsored by the State Department of Agriculture and has greatly increased the sheep population of the state, according to Mr. Crawford. He pointed out that despite the increase in the number of sheep within the state, many farmers have not been able to secure the breed and number they want. Mr. Crawford also stated that several men from other states are buying farms or groups of farms and desire to establish commercial flocks on them.

"This Department will act as an intermediary for those having flocks of sheep which they wish to sell," Crawford said, "and will endeavor to find markets and sources which will raise the standard of Maine sheep." Mr. Crawford pointed out that many requests are on file in his office asking him to locate certain numbers of foundation flocks.

Commissioner Frank P. Washburn urged all farmers who wish to improve their present flocks and those wishing to start new flocks to write to the Department of Agriculture stating the size, breed, and number of sheep they have to sell, or wish to purchase.

The quotation atop of page one last week became dislocated on some two or three hundred copies of the Citizen so it is doubtful if the readers were able to arrive at a sensible solution of its meaning. For the benefit of those receiving such copies, the line read, "Oblivion is full of men who permitted the opinion of others to overrule their belief in themselves."

Charles Lucas has purchased the meat business of Milton Penley and hereafter will do business at the old stand. He will keep a complete line of meats of best quality, and we predict for him a large trade.

The Congregational Church celebrated its 100th anniversary Oct. 19 and 21.

The Gould's Academy football eleven played their first game this season at North Bridgton last Saturday against the Bridgton Academy eleven. Our boys expected to play the second eleven, but found that many of the players were members of the first team last year, and that no first team had been selected this year, so it is not surprising that the game resulted in a score of 23 to 0 in favor of Bridgton.

West Bethel—The lumbering business of the late A. S. Bean is being closed up as rapidly as possible. A few cars are being loaded with wood, and some staves are being made into shooks, but the mill is done running, and many men are out of employment. About half of the families in town must move away.

East Bethel—Preparations are being made for lumbering operations to be carried on in this place, and soon East Bethel will blow its own whistle.

"THEY TELL ME"

Well here it is pretty near winter again by the looks of the calendar. The fairs are about over with and the frosts killed the gardens long ago. But to see the people traveling last Sunday you realize that Maine folks at least have an eye for beauty when the Maine scenery is at its best. As I said a while ago it's too bad the summer visitors have to miss the fall colors on the hills and mountains, but of course the whole country can't leave off work all at once to come up in New England. Let's be glad it's fall once a year so we can enjoy a September-October day, which if you ask me is a lot rarer than a day in June. June is all right if you don't have anything to do, but a fellow can work and enjoy himself in comfort better now. And the best part of it is just now. If it does rain like thunder or snow a little we can be pretty sure tomorrow of a sky that's clearer than it could ever be in June, and the thermometer will go up near the top. Don't you feel sorry for these folks starting down South? Uncle Hiram Joseph Barber of Auburn has moved to the C. M. Bennett house.

Mrs. Carmelo Onofrio visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Saunders, Monday.

Mrs. Imogene Lovejoy and daughter, Florence Westleigh of South Paris are spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lovejoy.

Gerald Cushing spoke at the Union Church last Sunday. Next Sunday, Oct. 15, there will be services in charge of Orrin Manifold, who was the summer minister at West Bethel this year. His many friends will welcome him back for the week-end.

The Young People's Society will hold a social dance at the Grange Hall Friday evening. Music will be furnished by Lord's Orchestra.

Mrs. Ada Mills is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Hutchinson a few days.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
AUTUMN PICTURES

Silhouette snaps of work on the farm are but one type of autumn picture opportunity. Note the effectiveness of the low viewpoint.

A FEW years back, most folks stopped taking pictures at the close of the summer season. Now, however, autumn has become one of the best and busiest snapshot seasons. Better cameras, faster films, and the natural charm of fall outdoors, make end-of-summer one long picture-whirl for the camera fan.

Stay-at-homes don't know what they're missing. There's a picture-subject at every fence-corner in this changing season. Fields are busy—crops are being harvested and late fruit gathered in. The weather is grand for hiking, with a camera slung over your shoulder and a pocket full of film. There is warm color and atmosphere in the landscape, richness in the cloud-massed skies, and grandeur in the autumn sunsets—a challenge to any camera.

Record autumn fully in pictures, and you will have a snapshot collection worthy of an album all its own. Tell the complete story—the season's change, the harvest, all the details that make autumn different.

Emphasize the transition, showing the decline of the year, the promise of cold weather to come. Falling leaves, wind-tossed corn silhouetted against a cloudy sky, plump pumpkins lying among the shocks of corn already cut, and horses or machinery pictures against the background of a riotous sunset... all are good. There are literally thousands of opportunities, everywhere. On an autumn hike or outing, let one of the girls in your party stand on a ridge, with the wind blowing her scarf and hair—and picture her with the blue sky as background. There's appeal in such snapshots. When there are magnificent clouds, slip a color filter over the camera lens to make them stand out against the blue sky. Use the filter, too, in picturing distant scenes, and far-away objects will show up more clearly in your pictures.

Depend on autumn for interesting pictures—keep your camera busy—and you won't be disappointed. Nowadays the picture year has four seasons, and this is one of the best.

GOULD ACADEMY . . .

At a recent meeting, the Camera Club of Gould Academy elected the following officers to serve for the coming year:

President—Romeo Baker
Secretary—Winfield Benner
Treasurer—Norman Kilby

The Fourth Annual Home-Coming Day at Gould Academy was held on Saturday, Oct. 7th, and was the most largely attended Home-Coming Day held thus far. Beautiful weather and the fact that the autumn foliage was at its height undoubtedly brought out many people who took full advantage of the opportunity to see the football game between Gould Academy and the Bridgton Academy J. V., and to visit the new Holden Hall and Marian True Gehring Students' Home, as well as Hanscom Hall. The tea which was held in the library of Holden Hall was particularly well attended. Mrs. Ellery C. Park and Mrs. Phillip Sayles presided at the tea table and were assisted by the various members of the faculty. The Tea Dance in the gymnasium held by the Gouldians with music furnished by them was enthusiastically enjoyed by a large number of the younger people.

Ushers for the day were: at Hanscom Hall, Alida Verrill, Erma Richardson, Madelyn Bird, Edna Young, Kathryn Davis and Virginia Davis, Sherman Williamson and Irving Brown; Students' Home, Rachel Field, Patricia Lavery, Esther Pike, June Chipman, Carol Gay, Lucia Packard, Marjorie Alvord and Ruth Bull; Holden Hall, Charles St. Thomas, Henry Haley, David Holden, Winfield Benner, Jack Haines, Minot Clapp, Warren Payeur and Earl Barlow.

The annual reception tendered to the Freshmen by the members of the Senior Class will be held at the William Bingham Gymnasium on Thursday evening, Oct. 19th. Members of the Academy and guests will be introduced through the receiving line by ushers from the Senior Class beginning promptly at 8 o'clock. Music for the evening will be furnished by Lord's Orchestra.

At recent class meetings the following officers were elected for the year: Seniors, President, Irving Brown of Bethel; Vice-President, Rodney Wentzel of Bethel; Secretary, Virginia Davis of Bethel; Treasurer, Carl Tucker of Mechanic Falls. Juniors, President, Romeo Baker of Bethel; Vice-President, Guy Swan of River Edge, N. J.; Secretary, June Chipman of South Poland; Treasurer, Marian Wight of Thomaston, Conn. Sophomores, President, Virgil Adams of East Sumner; Vice-President, Muriel Bean of Bethel; Secretary, Priscilla Abbott of Berlin, N. H.; Treasurer, Nicholas Amato of Boston, Mass.

Fox-Squirrel's Diet

The diet of the fox-squirrel ranges from crow's eggs to muskmelon, although it will live almost exclusively on various kinds of nuts if they can be had. Cutting down of nut-bearing trees has helped crows by limiting the squirrel population. When squirrels become too plentiful, they will at times raid truck gardens and cause heavy damage. It is better, according to the National Wildlife Federation, for hunters to harvest the surplus of any species of wildlife than for it to increase beyond the limits of its natural food supply.

Most Famous Stole

Epictetus was a Greek Stoic philosopher who lived approximately between the years 50 and 120. He was born a slave in Phrygia, banished from Rome by Domitian and taught philosophy in Ephesus. The nobility and moral earnestness of the man and simplicity of his style have made him a favorite with many not otherwise interested in the subject which he taught and which he wrote.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

WHEN SHOULD A MAN ADVERTISE?

BUSINESS men often talk about the problem of when they should advertise most. Should it be when business is good and sales come easily or when business is slow and sales are hard?

Those who believe in advertising most intensively when everybody has money, argue logically enough that it is wise, as Shakespeare himself pointed out several centuries ago, "to take the tide when it serves." Advertising then will prove of most value, some men believe.

Those, on the other hand, who believe a business should spend money for telling its story most aggressively when times are slow say that advertising is a business-building force and that it is, therefore, needed most when business needs building.

Whenever we have a temporary lull in business we see the spectacle of many advertisers "drawing in their horns" and refusing to spend money for advertising until times are easy once more.

The late P. D. Armour, great packing magnate, had the sanest view on the subject.

He always told his associates: "Advertise when times are good, because then your dollars show greatest returns. Advertise when times are poor, because if you don't advertise then your public won't know what you have to sell."

The public responds immediately to the man with courage enough to invest his money in advertising even when the condition of the market is not so good as he would like to see it. The public responds always to courage.

In 1921, when America had a short business depression, A. W. Erickson, now dead, made the directors of a company in which he was interested, agree to spend $150,000 a month for advertising during the next 12 months.

Business fell off. The directors wanted to renege. Mr. Erickson wouldn't let them. He made them spend their monthly advertising allowance. He had faith.

When prosperity returned, as it always does, that company, because of courageous leadership, skyrocketed to the top, a position it still holds.

What had happened was that its public, you consumers, read those advertisements and subconsciously became friendly to a business which would continue to tell you its story, in bad times as well as in good. The public reciprocated by giving it its trade.

Whenever a business man advertises it shows he has faith in himself, in his community, in his goods and in his customers.

He is a good business man with whom to trade.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—On board the Nord-Express, bound for Ostend, Dr. David Jebb is headed for America. With him is five-year-old Cynthia Thatcher, his temporary ward. On the train they meet Bill Gates, former classmate of David's. David tells Gates of his mission, and of his one unquenchable vice—an overwhelming desire for liquor. Jebb feels the urge coming to him again, and wants to safeguard the child, whose father is dead and whose mother awaits her coming in the United States.

CHAPTER II—David receives a minor injury while on the train, and a sympathetic passenger pours brandy down his throat. That is sufficient to kindle the flame of desire for liquor. Jebb takes the child with him, leaves the train, and begins drinking. Bill Gates, the old schoolmate, remains on board the train.

CHAPTER III

Hovering a little this side of sleep, his drowsy eyes saw, or seemed to see, through a window of quaint and alien design, a distant tower of soaring stature, just visible in the dim light of dusk. At its topmost tip the rising sun had cast a rose to bloom. The rest of the slim shaft was well enveloped in violet shadow.

In a balcony overlooking the tower he rather imagined than described a mote of a figure, and rather dreamed than heard a voice far, far away, and crying:

"Allahu Akbar! Allahu Akbar! Allahu Akbar!"

It was only on its fourth intonation that he made out the words, and then they meant nothing to him. There followed a chant in the same strange language, so mellowed by remoteness that it interwove with the dream-echo on the beam of Jebb's drowsiness. The words were strange and there was no meaning, only a foreign music, in that concluding phrase. "Prayers are better than sleep," when the drowsy and dubious muezzin, weary of the steep spiral stairway, adds to the surly Azan.

A window of quaint and alien design.

When his eyes actually perceived the minaret through the latticed window, and made out what manner of scene he was in, he sat up with a start. He fell back immediately. His nerves jangled like a harp thrown on the floor.

To move his head over so slightly was to put himself on the rack, but seriously forced him to endure the morning of his life so that he could study his whereabouts. Wonder filled him till he thought he was back in a dream.

The last thing he remembered was a sense of drowsiness on a train in Germany. But this was neither a train, nor Germany.

"This is Japan," thought Jebb, who had never been there.

He lay on a sort of wall-platform covered with a heap of cotton mattresses. Over him were spread quilts of delicate fabric. On the floor were many rugs tinted like heaps of autumnal leaves.

"This is Persia," he concluded, thinking of the rugs. He had never been to Persia.

At some vaguely later period he thought he heard the creak of an opened door, and his own leaden eyelids seemed to creak as he heaved them ajar. The door was indeed slightly opened, and peering into the room was a face. It was the black and glistening skull of a Negro—something more than a Negro and less than a man.

Leaving his slippers outside the door, the fellow padded over to Jebb and with soft, fat hands adjusted the pillow under his head.

"He wants me to die comfortably," sighed Jebb helplessly.

Then the man shuffled back to the corridor and lugged in a brazier full of glowing charcoal. Squatting about it, he began to brew an ebony syrup. The voluminous aroma floating to Jebb announced it to him as coffee.

"Poisoned, no doubt," thought Jebb. But he was so sick that he did not much care.

"Where am I? How did I get here? What country is this? Who are you?"

But the answer was a falsetto gibberish in which Jebb, who was something of a linguist, could find no kinship to any language of his acquaintance.

Jebb noticed now that he was clothed neither in his street-suit, nor in his pyjamas, but in a garment he could not recognize. His hands, remembering a habit he had acquired and lost, went convulsively to his waist. His money belt was gone, his ten thousand dollars had evaporated—and the belt with it.

"Where are my clothes?" he demanded, and again in bad German, "Wo sind mein Kleider?" and in tourist French, "Ou sont mes habits?"

But the black only gibbered.

Then the fellow backed out as from a presence with many a long bow. Left alone to meditation, Jebb glanced idly down and noted that his thumb wore a deep scar. His experienced eye showed him what sort of creature it was. He remembered the accident on the train. But who had lanced his thumb? And when? Where? Why? The wound had already healed. It must have been days ago.

And on the little finger of his left hand was a ring, a curious ring, with a dark and cloudy stone of great size and unknown name, set alongside a diamond, also large and of evident price.

He took the ring off and stared at it. On the inner rim was the legend "C. to J." "J" was plainly for Jebb, but who was "C"?—certainly not Cynthia. Who, then? It might be a love-token—but whose?

There was a sound of colloquy in the hall outside, of angry argument. He recognized the uncanny treble of the slave, and another voice, lower, but a woman's voice.

The door opened wide and the slave paused on the sill. His face was as livid as the ashes in the charcoal brazier and his eyes flashed and roved in their sockets. But he made reluctant way for a figure that floated rather than walked, and floated straight from the pages of the "Thousand Night and One Nights."

Her costume was one great black cloud from which none of her transpired, not even the half-sheltered eyes of the Orient.

The slave oozed through the door and closed it, but as if he would cling to the other side.

The veil bent and billowed in low curves and through it came these English words, with long pauses and gropings.

"The effendi has slept long. Allah be thanked, and I do hope he slept well also."

Instinctively, hoping to make himself better understood, he spoke very loudly and in a foolish dialect.

"May me ask where me have pleasure to be?"

"The effendi is in Uskub."

"Uskub!" he gasped. "I never heard of Uskub. Where, please, is it?"

"It is in the vilayet of Kossovo. It is not far from Nish."

"Uskub! Nish!" he wailed. "Kossovo! Where am I? What is a vilayet? Why do you call me 'effendi'? My name is Jebb. How on earth did I get here? If I am on earth."

"The effendi is on earth—very much on earth, but how he gets here, that is perhaps more a wonder to me as to the effendi. Perhaps in his time the effendi weel inform me. I am but woman, it is perhaps pardoned if I have a curiosity."

Jebb's plight was pitiful: "I don't know how I got here—I don't know where I am—or who you are. I don't believe I know my own name—or anything at all."

The voice mothered him now:

"Then I shall not derange the poor, weary effendi with the impertinence of to make questions. I tell you what I know. Last night there was great storm here in Uskub. I was much afraid of the storm, but it is beautiful, too. I am watching through my window. I can just see the road over that high wall. Great flash of lightning comes and in the light I see man—it was the effendi. He is walk in the road. Whence you come I don't know. You are there. You look very wild and staggering. You fall down in the meedst of the road. Then darkness. I was more afraid, for I thought first of some djinn."

"Some gin?" echoed Jebb.

"Yes, djinn, the demon—you know, I watch again and a new lightning shows the effendi lying still in the road, no demon, but poor seek man. I clap my hands hard. Jaffar, who sleeps before my door—the same who is wait upon you this morning—he comes at my call. I tell him to bring the poor effendi into house. At last he goes out the gate and brings you in. I see you, you are very seek and do not speak—only moan. I tell him to place you in room and make you a bed and take your clothes to be made dry. All these he does very secret and terribly afraid."

"But the child I had with me?"

"The child?" she echoed blankly.

"Yes, the little girl!"

"You have a young daughter, then?" And the veil did not entirely strain out a tang of disappointment.

"She is not my daughter," he explained; "she is the child of a friend."

"Oh!"

"She was in my charge. I was taking her to America. She must have been with me. She—oh, she must have been with me."

"You did had no child with you when I see you in the storm. Jaffar, he say nothing of a child! It is only you he find."

"But the little girl, the poor little wife—I must go hunt for her."

He rose to his feet, but his nerves flared and burned like live wires. His knees refused their office, and he would have gone crashing back wards had she not risen swift, caught him in her arms, and caged him to the cushions.

The hidden woman was something of her strangely potent prayer, and she clasped her hands instantly the door opened, and the black was there. Jebb did not look to see, but he heard a heated parley between mistress and slave. At length there was silence and the woman said:

"He is good. He was afraid to leave me lest the other servants find you, but I did make him go, and to send my woman to bring food and to keep watch. He is good now to bring you the little child. He will search the city as if it is a cupboard."

"Why is he afraid that the other servants might find me?"

"It is perhaps kindest to tell the effendi everything. Last night my fear for you overcame all my other fears, all my religion, my duty. I thought only that some poor man goes to perish. I shall give to him shelter for the night in Allah's name. But Jaffar tells me you are too weak to walk, and I cannot even send you to the city to a khan or to the house of a friend. He wish to put you again in the street. I resolve to come to see you for myself. Jaffar oppose me, he try to hold me back. He loves me much. He is horrified, afraid, and ashamed for me."

"Why?" said Jebb feebly.

"I have crossed the mabeyn."

"The ma—what?"

"The hall between the haremluk and the selamluk."

"The more you tell me, the less I know," said Jebb. "Won't you please explain to me in words of one syllable where I am, what country this is, whose house this is?"

"The effendi has much hungry. I theenk you listen better after you have to eat. I dare not have such poor food as we have brought by all the slaves, but only my own woman, if the effendi excuse."

She clasped her hands again, and a slave girl looked in, then entered, carrying on her head a brass tray laden with strange dishes beautifully bedecked. She set down the tray while she brought a low, pearl-patterned table forward and placed it before Jebb.

After Jebb had eaten he said: "Tell me why I brought you and your house such danger."

"If my husband should find that I have talked with you, he would keel us both."

"Your husband!" And now it was his turn to betray a flaw of regret. "You are married, then?"

"Yes and no."

"Yes and no?"

"My husband" did not raise my veil after the ceremony. I was a gift-wife, and unwelcome."

"A gift-wife!" groaned Jebb. "I have a splitting headache."

"Shall I tell you who I am—from the beginning? Miruma is my name. It means the sun and the moon. I am great, yes? to be both sun and moon. I am borned in Circassia. My poor father is poor and Allah sends him more child than wealth. But we live in mountains—the Caucasus peaks, and we do not need much. And then my poor father dies himself—Allah grant him bliss!—and my mother has no man, and five child."

"Follows some years of ugly poverty, and not much to eat. I am grow to have nine years. People tell my mother I am beautiful and shall become more. And I did. I was very beautiful till I became old woman."

"Are you an old woman?" said Jebb with a sigh. "Your voice and your hands do not seem old."

"But they are. I did pass my twenty-fifth year last Shaban."

Jebb sighed again, a comfortabler sigh.

"My mother sees that I shall be beautiful for awhile and she sells me as slave."

"The brute!"

"No. She is good mother. She sells me to rich hanim, a lady who is most kind to me. In Turkey a woman slave who is pretty is treated wonderful kind. I am buyed by great lady—a rich hanim."

"A rich what, please?"

"Hanım—that means a lady, madame; same like effendi means monsieur, mister."

"Should I call you hanım, then?"

"If you wish to be very respectable—or is it respectful?—you should call me hanım effendi, or hanım effendim—that means like 'my lady.'"

"But you tell me effendi means monsieur."

"Yes, and hanım effendi means monsieur madame, or mister madame—it is very respectable. But I like better be called joost madame; it sound very educated."

"All right, hanım effendi, I will call you 'madame' sometimes, though I like hanım effendi, or hanım effendim—like you. But you were telling me how you were bought by the rich—hanım?"

"Yes, and I am educate like as I am her own daughter child. I am teach the Engleash, the Francais, the Roosian, the to play, to sing, to paint, to dance. I am become very wise lady."

"Five years I am live with this hanım like her bes' beloved' child. One day I meet wife of a Bey; she tells her husband that I am beautiful so much I must be made as a present to the Padishah himself. He buyed me."

"He buyed you?"

"Yes," the Veil answered with a certain pride. "They Bey gived me to the Padishah, on the anniversary of the Kalij Ala, when they did bind the great sword of Othman on him."

"And who is the Padishah?" said Jebb.

She gasped at this. "The Pad-shah! You do not know who he is? He is the Sultan, the greatest of all kings, the shadow of Allah on earth."

"Oh!" from Jebb.

"A year I did lived in the harem of the Khalif, and then the Valideh Sultana tells that I am again-to be given away as a present, this time to a pasha and to be really a wife. My heart leap up for, of course, a woman is nothing if Allah does not make her the priceless gift of a child, a man-child. My new husband" is then great man rising in the world like the sun himself. But sometimes the clouds come before the sun reach his zenith.

"Hussein Fehmi Pasha is begin very poor; he was a khanji's boy—you do not know what that is?—a khanji is man who keeps a khan—how you say, a little inn. But he is too brave for to make the beds and cook the coffee, he becomes soldier and is rise. And the Padishah call him to the Yildiz-Kiosk and make him decorated and titles him Pasha. Then he make him Vila of the Aidin vilayet. It is then that the Padishah present me to Fehmi Pasha."

"And he married a girl as young as you were then?" gasped Jebb.

"Oh, yes, effendi. We have a saying, 'Before your daughter is sixteen, she should be married or buried.' At first Fehmi Pasha did lived at Smyrna and have a splendid white summer palace at Kogar-Yali. But Fehmi Pasha has a quarrel with the spy the Padishah send to watch him. The spy is tell wicked bad lies, and my poor husband" is exile to Uskub. And here I live."

"But what did you mean by calling yourself a Yes-and-No wife?"

"Already the pasha did have a wife whom he love extremely much. Fehmi Pasha loves his only wife. He wants no other. She did bear him many sons and some daughters; why should he have other wives? But when the Padishah present him me, he is afraid to refuse. He thank the Padishah one thousand times; he makes me free woman, and he marries me, but he does not lift my veil."

Suddenly there was the sound as of a little child walling. Jebb's heart lurched. Had his lost been found? The door burst open and Jaffar rushed into the room. It was Jaffar who was crying, hysterically, with words which even his mistress could not understand.

"He's had an accident," said Jebb, and rose at once to go to him, but his knees cautioned him to remain. "Bring him here." It was the voice of authority. "Ask him if he didn't slip and fall."

The question repeated in Turkish brought a flood of confirmation. "Eees eet awfully serious!" came from the trembling veil.

"No, it's nothing much. It hurts a trifle," Jebb admitted with the relative standard of pain that surgeons acquire. "Tell the black idiot not to pull away from me. I'll help him; I'm a surgeon."

Jebb's fingers went out on the discolored black flesh like ten white carpenters. They pressed here, pulled there, twisted, urged, persuaded, as the victim writhed and blubbered.

Suddenly there was a snap, and the pain was gone with such suddenness that it left ecstasy. Jaffar almost fainted of joy. Henceforth, whoever might nominally pay Jaffar his wages, really he was Jebb's slave.

"Now if I could have some light wood—a cigar box, or something to make a splint."

"Would thees sofa do?" Miruma said, pointing to an inlaid tabouret.

"Yes, but it's too handsome," said Jebb.

Her answer was to pick up the low table and smash it on the floor, bringing two of the slender legs to Jebb.

"And now if I could have some muslin—or a long strip of cloth."

Swish! She had ripped off yards of her robe.

"And now," he said, "would hanım effendi please hold these boards, ad—here and here—while I bind it all together."

Two hands came out of the cloud, and rested right under her eyes.

In binding the splints together, it was necessary for Jebb to touch those hands. They seemed to sting him like white fire.

"Tell him to wear the sling for a week and the splints for two weeks," he said as he finished, regarding a professional accuracy of tone. "Ask him if he found out anything about the child."

The question was repeated, Miruma spoke with wonderful gentleness:

"No, poor Jebb Effendi, he found not the child. He is search the all of Uskub. Nobody is see a little girl of the Franks."

"The Franks?—no, no, she is an American child."

"All you Ingiliz and Europeans are Franks to us."

Briefly he poured out to her his story, only he did not tell the cause of the great hiatus in his life. He simply said that he became ill. He had not the bravery to confess the truth.

It was the crowning ignominy of his plight that he must stoop to beggary or to starvation. He postponed the admission of his penury to the last moment and then postponed it again.

And the answer to his nauseating apology was that she had known it all the time. Jaffar, finding him unconscious in the street, had, at her orders, undressed him, bathed him, put him to bed, and taken his clothes, drenched as they were with rain, to dry them in the kitchen and to iron them while the other servants slept.

The Golden Text is: "If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous" (1 John 2: 1).

The citations from the Bible include the following passages: "Behold, my servant shall deal prudently, he shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." (Isaiah 52: 13, and 53: 5).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy.

A TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF MISS CORA M. BEAN

Quiet, unassuming, retiring, she carried with her always an atmosphere of friendliness and always one was met with the same sympathetic greeting and winsome smile.
Her family and friends knew she could be depended upon to meet the crises of life calmly and bravely and with a determination to stress as little as possible her own pain and to lessen that of others.

Sleeping so peacefully, quiet and easy,
Nothing can wake her to life's daily care;
But long we shall miss her tender compassion
And helpful endeavors to make life more fair.

The flowers she loved will blossom in beauty,
The places that knew her shall know her no more,
And we who have loved her will speak of her softly
Yet never again shall she open our door.

But beyond in God's wonderful home land,
Which we read of in mystical lore;
We know she is happy in finding
The loved who have gone before.
